

Who Cares for Kansas Children?

Early Education Workforce Study

2010 State Child Care Profile

About this study

In 2010, the Who Cares for Kansas Children? Early Education Workforce Study was conducted.

Early childhood professionals were surveyed about their employment. Their responses were used to develop the 2010 Kansas Child Care Workforce Profile.

Families were surveyed about the service they received after utilizing a child care resource and referral agency. Their responses, combined with other statistical resources, were used to create state, regional, and county profiles.

The result is a collection of reports (pictured above) that provides a detailed picture of the child care workforce and the families who need child care in Kansas.

Child care affects us all...

Child care in Kansas is more than a half billion dollar industry. Care must be affordable, accessible and of high quality so that families can work and businesses can grow — strengthening our economy and ensuring strong leaders for our future. Research shows that when children attend high-quality care, they are more successful in school.

What is the reality?

Working families need care for their children and must stretch their budgets to meet the rising cost of care. Average child care for one infant and one preschooler is a staggering 20% of a Kansas family's median income. As a key component of the child care infrastructure, child care resource and referral (CCR&R) agencies improve the field of early education by providing critical services to Kansans which include:

- Helping families find high-quality child care
- Educating families, early childhood professionals, and the community about what quality child care looks like
- Supporting early childhood professionals through training and technical assistance

Kansas Demographics

- 16% of children under age 18 live in poverty.

Affordability of Child Care

While the average cost of family child care in Kansas is typically less than the average cost of care in a center, child care continues to represent a substantial cost for families. The average annual cost of full-time care for an infant in a family child care home represents 9% of the state median family income. Annual cost of full-time infant care in a child care center represents 11% of the state median family income. The table below indicates the average annual cost of full-time care for one child by age and type of care.
